"this" = resolving the ambiguity? Your point is not clear. It would be possible if Romance had separate subject-referring and non-subject-referring possessives, like ...

There can be ambiguity sometimes, because "in case of" can mean either "in the event of" or "for risk of". But I don't think that sentence's ambiguous. I understand what you ...

Hello friends, Do you think that ambiguity takes place in the following sentence? - "We saw a man on the hill with a telescope" According to me, there are different meanings for ...

I have found it is a quite tricky phrase because just from it you can't tell whether it means give A to receive B or have A to replace B. For example:For a healthier diet I want to ...
